BACKGROUND

Nearly 70% of Afghan refugees in Pakistan live in urban and rural areas along with their host communities. This includes nearly 500,000 school-aged children, many of whom have been accessing Pakistan’s national education system. Despite the challenging education context in Pakistan, the Government has, over the years, maintained a generous approach of enabling access of Afghan refugee children to public schools, recognizing this as an essential investment in their human capital.

In recognition of this inclusive approach and policies, the RAHA education interventions seek to channel vital investments into Pakistan’s national education system with a view to enhancing its absorption capacity and the quality of services provided, with benefits for refugee and Pakistani children alike.

The RAHA education projects are designed based on the needs identified by the communities, and implemented in close consultations with local/provincial/federal Government authorities and other partners. The projects are fully aligned with and supportive of UNHCR Pakistan’s Education Strategy, as well as the regional multi-year Solutions Strategy for Afghan Refugees (SSAR) which identified youth empowerment through education, skills training and livelihoods as its cross-cutting priority theme.

Global Compact on Refugees calls on the international community to “contribute resources to expand and enhance the quality and inclusiveness of national education systems in refugee hosting countries to facilitate access by refugee and host community children to primary, secondary and tertiary education. Additional support could be contributed to expand educational facilities (including for technical or vocational training), teaching capacities, flexible certified learning programmes, development and implementation of national education sector plans that include refugees, and to facilitate recognition of equivalency of academic, professional and vocational qualifications.”

In line with the 2030 Sustainable Development Agenda, in particular its overarching commitment to leave no one behind and the SDG#4 which seeks to ensure inclusive and equitable education for all; as well as the Global Compact on Refugees which calls for greater and more equitable responsibility-sharing by the international community, UNHCR continues to advocate for:
